A. H. Forgey, Esq., City Receiver, Wheeling, W. Va.

DEAR SIR:-1 beg to acknowledge receipt of your rayor of the 25th Inst. In receipt of your rayor of the 25th Inst. In reply to your rayors for my opinion would state, that I do not think! good policy to attempt to float city bods at a lower rate than 35 per cent, not of 1 think it would be good policy not onke any provisions for payment on principal until the expiration of ten yarman as there are a great many consultant as there are a great many consultant as the good policy not only in the capital to posterity.

In arrangement whereby a sinking fund of 3 per cent could be set aside each year, with such stringent provisions that it could not be touched at any time for annual expenditures, and an arrangement whereby at the expiration of ten years the accumulated sinking fund could be used to retire 30 per cent of the bond, would, in my opinion, meet with the approval of the majority of the voters of the city. Unless, however, something of this kind be rejected, notwithstanding the fact that something must be done to provide for the payment of compromise bonds coming due next year. Yours truly, Olitaced.

IN THE CHURCHES.

On Sunday morning at 10:30 there will be the regular service at St. Matthew's P. E. church, which will be read by the curate, who will assist the Rev. A. W. Mann. This gentleman will translate the service into the sign language for the deaf mutes, who have been invited to be present. It is hoped that all the deaf mutes of this city and vicinity will avil themselves of this opportunity to join in the worship of Almighty God.

The Pittsburgh synod of the general syned of the Evangelical Lutheran church will hold its fifty-seventh annual convention in the Pirst English Evangelical Lutheran church of this city in October. The opening service will be held on the evening of October 11, and the convention will last until the following Monday. This synod is confined to a few of the western countles of Pennsylvania, principally to Allegheny, Armstrong, Westmoreland, Butler, Indiana, etc., and it occupies this territory in common with another Pittsburgh synod belonging to the general council of the Evangelical Lutheran church. It has but one church in West Virginia, namely, the First English Lutheran, on Sixteenth street. The synod numbers sixty-eight ministers and as many charges, and 12,000 communicants. Each charge is entitled to one lay representative, besides its pastor, in the synod. This would make a membership of 135; but the charges are not all represented, and a number of the ministers are always absent from every convention owing to old age, sickness, etc. The number expected at of the ministers are always absent from every convention owing to old age, sickness, etc. The number expected at this convention is about 100. It has always been the custom for the congregation and town in which the synod meets to provide entertainment by opening their houses to its members. Committees have been appointed to select homes for them during their short tax, in the city. In avery place, in lect homes for them during their short stay in the city. In every place in which the synod has met the congre-gation inviting it has received much assistance along this line from fami-lies other than their own. Any assist-ance that may be offered here will be gratefully received, for although the English Lutheran church has quite an number of members, yet it has not so many families that are well prepared to entertain strangers. A full list of the members of synod and their entertain-ers will be given the papers at the time.

back to nature. The result of this is to give human freedom. It tends to the alleviation of human suffering. The study of nature and of scelence tends toward the development of truth It tends to the material comfort of man. It tends to lessen the ills of While all this is true, there must be a check on it or it will tend to materialism. The true part goes back to nature. The speaker said that there were so many things that could be said on the subject that he would not attempt to say them, but would confine himself to tell how the subject should be taught in school. He would have this study in every grade, from the kindergarten up, along with history and literature. The teacher should bring into the school room specimens from nature, and give lessons to the children from the objects themselves Have them talk about them, form sen-tences concerning them, write about them and draw pictures of them.

This will interest the child in a way that nothing else will. The child must study nature first from nature itself. Beware of nature readers-they have their uses, but they also have their abuses. After the child has seen for himself, it may then be a good plan to read to him what somebody else has seen concerning them. Take the children to the field, and give them lessons there. The study of nature will be a joy to the teacher and pupil. After the talk the roll was called.

Professor Creamer then gave a writing lesson on the blackboard, showing how he would conduct a lesson in writing, analyzing the letters, etc. Quite a number of the teachers asked questions, which were promptly answered by Mr. Creamer. The exercise was interesting from first to last.

After a short recess, "The West Virginia Hills" were sung, Prof. Hammond stating that this was the last song of the institute. It was sung with a vim. Superintendent Anderson spoke a few words in praise of the institute as it had been conducted during the week. He stated that those who had failed to be there had missed a treat. He emphasized the leading thoughts running through all the talks of the week, i. e., that there could be no success
